

EXAMINER TELEPHONES

EDITORIAL ROOMS—
Ind. Phone, two rings.....No. 56
Bell Phone, two rings.....No. 56
BUSINESS OFFICE—
Ind. Phone, one ring.....No. 56
Bell Phone, one ring.....No. 56

BREVITIES

Quick cure for sore throat, Ambler's canker and diphtheria remedy. Price 50 cents.

GRASS CREEK LUMP COAL, $4.00 at yard. Castle Gate, Clear Creek, Rock Springs, always on hand. Consumers' Coal Co., A. A. Shaw, Mgr. Phone 418.

William Evert Gladstone, the "Grand Old Man," who was for 61 years a public leader, and the centenary of whose birth occurs this year, will be the illustration for the sermon in the First Presbyterian church to-night on "The Place and Power of Real Religion in Public Life."

The ideal fuel for the year round, Lewis Good Coal, phone 149.

Filed Bond.—Dr. J. W. Pidecock has filed a bond in the sum of $1,000 as county physician during the next year, with the American Surety company, of New York city, as surety.

NO CAUSE FOR ALARM.—If your attention is attracted to Washington Ave.—It's simply the applause at the Globe. Come and join.

Qualified as Director.—E. W. Kennedy has formally qualified as a director of the Single Gold Standard Mining and Milling company.

Owing to the continued popularity of Messrs. McMillan and Mansfield, the New York banjo and guitar team, whose clever work at the Faustian has been so greatly enjoyed by Ogdentites during the past two weeks, the management has retained their services for the present week. Their music is a treat. Don't miss hearing them.

Appraisal Filed.—An inventory and appraisal of the estate of the late Seth Fletcher has been filed in the office of the county clerk.

Fresh broken crackers, 25c a bag, at Hess' Bakery, opposite the Fire Station, or at the Cracker Factory.

Inventory Filed.—An inventory and appraisal of the estate of the late Daniel H. Ogden, has been filed, with the county clerk.

AMUSEMENTS.

UTAHNA THEATER

MOORE AND ETHIER, Proprietors

Beginning

SUNDAY, JAN. 24

THE MOORE STOCK COMPANY

In the strongest play of the season

"A SON'S DEVOTION"

And run the remainder of the week

PRIZE MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY.

A forty-piece French China Cottage Dinner Set will be given away on Saturday evening, Jan. 23rd.

ADMISSION 10, 20 and 30c.

Order seats in advance.

Both Phones.

GRAND BALL

Given by

U. B. of Carpenters and Joiners of America

ROYAL DANCING ACADEMY

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 27, 1909

CASH PRIZES

Admission, 50 Cents Per Couple

Extra Lady, 25 Cents

Both Phones 647.

Western Foundry and Machine Co.

Near Cor. 23rd and Lincoln Ave.

John Pingree, Pres., R. B. Porter, Vice-Pres., J. M. Doran, Sec.

Iron and brass castings. Machine work and repairing of every description. Bolders tested and repaired. Steam and Hot Water Heating a specialty. Heating plans furnished free to prospective builders. Best of reference. All work guaranteed.

Both Phones 647.

Greatest Saving Opportunity Offered In Ogden This Season

Baron's Mid-Winter Clearance Sale. All this season's goods must go. Reductions of 50c on the dollar. Bargains all over the house. Men's Suits, Men's Shirts, Men's Trousers, Hats, Shoes, Neckwear, Underwear, Socks, etc.

This Offer Don't Last Long. Come Now.

Exclusive Store for Men

2345 WASH. AVE.

Baron's

Monday is the day to Come

2345 WASH. AVE.

a petition from the administratrix, praying for authority to sell certain real estate in Weber county belonging to the estate.

Place a trial order of Groceries for cash at Tribe & Jones and see how far it will go.

Leaves for Trip East.—Manager Harry Reinshriber of the Mercantile Installment company, will leave shortly for the east on his annual purchasing trip for the house. After visiting relatives at Des Moines, Iowa, he will proceed to Chicago, Buffalo, Boston, and New York, where he will remain at least a month. During Mr. Reinshriber's absence, the local store will be under the management of Isadore Cohen.

CHEAP COAL, Grass Creek, $4.00 per ton. Rock Springs and Castle Gate always on hand. Parker Coal Co.

Funeral of Yerger.—Funeral services will be held over the remains of James Yerger, at 2 p. m., Sunday, at the Lynne meeting house. Interment at city cemetery.

STORAGE at reasonable rates, in good brick building. If you need any room, consult John Scowcroft & Sons Company.

Westbound Business Fairly Brisk.—Notwithstanding the fact that east-bound freight traffic is now lighter than at any time for months on the Harriman lines, westbound business keeps amazingly well and nine switched engines and crews are kept busy in Ogden yards night and day. Freight crews sent west with heavy trains are deadheaded back to Ogden in a caboose attached to the rear end of east-bound passenger trains. Trainmen are running "first in, first out," and notwithstanding the dull railroad season, are making fairly good mileage.

Practically the same condition obtains with engine crews and in the local Southern Pacific shops, Master Mechanic Malone is making no further reductions in the different departments. The Southern Pacific plant at Ogden is doing a large amount of custom work for the Union Pacific, Oregon Short Line and other roads, and this work, aggregating thousands of dollars each month, has the effect of keeping the large force steadily employed during an otherwise quiet period in shop work.

Burns anniversary tickets for sale at "The Toggery," "Culley's," Hutchison's, Great American Tea Store and MacBeth's. Adults, 50c each; juveniles, 25c each.

Joseph Parry and Sons Co. announce arrival of a car of new monuments and headstones at their place of business, 2253 Washington avenue.

The Lace Curtain, Blanket and Comfort sale is still on at Boyle's.

Grand Ball by the U. B. of Carpenters and Joiners of America, Wednesday, Jan. 27, 1909. Royal Dancing Academy.

GRAND CONCERT AND DANCE, Wednesday Eve., January 27, 1909, under the auspices of Y. M. M. I. A. of the Third Ward, at Third Ward Amusement Hall. Admission 50c per couple, including concert and dance. Tickets to concert only 25c each.

Rev. J. H. Owens of Pueblo, Colo., will address the Ogden Christian League tonight, 8:30 p. m., at Elk's hall, 2458 Washington avenue. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Musical Next Friday.—The second musicale in the Musical History course will be given in the Congregational church, Friday, Jan. 29, at 8 p. m. Miss Carrie Browning will play. Mr. Gus Saunders will sing. Miss Margaret Armstrong will give two numbers on the violin and Mrs. J. M. Bishop will lecture on Grief and its contemporaries. Everybody invited to attend.

Released on Bond.—William Chapell, who was being held to answer before the district court and show cause why he should not be adjudged in contempt of court for failure to pay alimony to his divorced wife, was last evening released on a $250 bond. The case will be called for hearing on January 30.

Residence of Fred Wright Sacked.—The residence of Fred Wright, 2347 Madison avenue, was entered last night by burglars, who quite completely sacked the premises and carried away with them a number of articles in jewelry and other things of value. The thief or thieves, entered the house through the back door, which was broken open. No arrests were made last evening as no clue to the identity of the guilty parties could be ascertained.

Arrested for Forgery.—F. J. Hill, who was arrested by Officer Crompton, Friday evening, and charged with forgery, is suspected with having been implicated in a forgery at Rawlins, Wyo., a few days ago. Another man who gives his name as Roberts, was apprehended by Officer Robert Burk of the Ogden police force and U. P. Detective Hart, at Salt Lake, yesterday afternoon. Roberts is also under suspicion of being connected with the forgery, was landed in the city jail for safe keeping. Two men will be held for the Wyoming officers, who telegraphed the warrant of arrest of the two men. It is alleged that these are the two men who a few days ago forged the name of a railroad employee on a pay check amounting to $84. The officers state they are quite certain that they have the right parties.

Max Greenburg was arrested in the "Alley" last evening on the charge of consorting with a woman there.

John Holley of Goldfield, Nev., is visiting Ogden friends for a few days.

STENGER HAS RESIGNED

General Superintendent of the Rio Grande Leaves Gould Service.

Salt Lake, Jan. 23.—General Superintendent Ernest Stenger of the Rio Grande lines in Utah has resigned his resignation to take effect February 1. Mr. Stenger is out of town today, so his reasons for resigning could not be secured from him, but it is understood in railway circles that he is pretty well worn out with the strenuous experiences of the past year, which included the prolonged maintenance strike, shortage in motive power and equipment, and other unpleasant features which have made life in the operating department somewhat trying.

Mr. Stenger resigned the superintendency of the Union Pacific lines in Colorado April 1, 1907, to accept his present position with the Rio Grande. He is considered an A-1 railroad man, not only in the operating but in other departments, and there is considerable guessing today as to whether he will return to the Pacific, or go to the Moffat road. It is pretty generally accepted that he can go where he likes. But it is understood Mr. Stenger will take a really much-needed rest of some months before putting on the harness again. It was stated at the Rio Grande offices today that he leaves with the best of feeling existing between him and the management of the road, and all his associates. The appointment of a new superintendent rests with General Manager Ridgeway, who, it is stated, will select Mr. Stenger's successor during the coming week. The departing official has made many friends since coming to Utah in all circles with which he has come in contact, and will leave with their best wishes.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

This lecture is as much out of the ordinary as is its puzzling title. There is a popular one and full of thought and mirth. It is said to be a mosaic of great truths, laid in a cement of humor. The Whitney Bros. quartet say that they have followed Mr. Long all over the country, and as far as they can judge, no other lecture ever given in America has made the profound impression that has been made by 'Lightning and Toothpicks.'

The lecture is filled with bright and amusing illustrations, and invariably, the audience is held from beginning to end in close attention and sympathetic interest.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

Thousands of people have been struck by Sylvester A. Long's lightning. Here is an amusing incident, and gives one a peep into the merit of the discourse: "As a New England audience was leaving the opera house after Mr. Long had delivered his lecture, 'Lightning and Toothpicks,' an old gentleman was heard to say: 'Well, I never saw lightning strike so many people, and we will have double toothpicks to chew at for a year.' There is no lack of wit and humor in Mr. Long's lecture, and he has a voice and presence that lend themselves splendidly to the enchantment of the message.

PUZZLING YOU CANNOT RIDE ON TRAIN

LIGHTNING AND TOOTHPICKS' NUMBER SERIES.

Sylvester A. Long's Lightning Will Strike Ogden People at Weber Academy Thursday Evening.

New Rule Making the Overland Limited a Train With But a Few Stops.

An important order affecting passenger service on the Union Pacific road between Omaha and Ogden, has just gone into effect and will be rigidly adhered to by passenger conductors in the future. Passenger trains Nos. 1 and 2, known as the Overland Limited, will be reserved entirely for through and interstate traffic, and passengers without proper interstate tickets will not be carried on either of these two trains. No passes, second class or emigrant tickets will be honored on the Overland Limited. For instance, westbound passengers ticketed at Council Bluffs, Iowa, will be ticketed to any point where the fast train stops in Nebraska, and passengers from Omaha and other points in Nebraska will be ticketed on this train to any point in Wyoming, Utah or other western states where the train is scheduled to stop. No passengers will be accepted on this train except for purely interstate traffic.

In other words, passengers will not be allowed to board the train at one point in any state, ticketed for another point within the boundaries of the same state—no matter whether the trains are scheduled to stop at the second point or not.

In making this change it is the purpose of the Union Pacific management to reserve the overland limited trains entirely for first class passenger traffic from one state to another.

In order to accommodate local state traffic, however, a chair car has been attached to both the east and west-bound Los Angeles Limited trains, over the Union Pacific road between Omaha and Ogden, for the use of passengers with first class tickets. No extra charge, or Pullman fare, will be exacted from passengers occupying the chair car on these trains, but the latter will only stop at division points and the more important stations on the system.

The new order was issued January 17 and is now in effect on all divisions of the Union Pacific system between Omaha and Ogden.

Passenger trains Nos. 3 and 9 from the east, and trains Nos. 10 and 4 from local trains and will stop at all points between this city and the eastern terminus of the Union Pacific system.

THE BURNS ANNIVERSARY.

The Burns anniversary is going to be the great event of the season and this is an official invitation to the public to attend. Splendid program of songs and dance. Oration on Burns by Hon. B. H. Roberts. Remember, January 25 at Congress Dancing Academy. Auspices, Scottish Crochets. Tickets 50 cents each.

ABSCONDING CLERK UNHEARD FROM

Nothing has yet been heard of Nell W. Davison, the absconding clerk from the Ogden office of the Pacific Express company, and officers have so far failed to locate the young man, who appropriated several hundred dollars from the corporation by whom he was employed.

Considerable mail has arrived at the express office, addressed to Davison, and Local Agent Dobbs will turn this over to the postoffice authorities within a day or two if the young man is not heard from. Part of the mail is believed to be from members of Davison's family, who were ignorant of his crime until recently, when they were furnished with copies of the Standard containing articles in reference to his disappearance and his alleged theft.